

*It is not the answers that we should seek,
but knowing the right question to ask*

I Asked ... And God Responds

During an especially difficult time in my life, I felt that I needed answers because my life wasn't working the way I would like.

I remembered that God always speaks to us but most of us do not listen. I decided that I would ask God for answers and would listen as intently as possible. This is what came to mind.

The answers are within dear one. They always are. If you can ask the question the answer already exists. In whatever you do, whatever you feel there it is, and you do not have to wait for me. You decide, that is how I experience life - through you. The reason you feel the way you do is because you don't trust yourself. That is your downfall, feeling that you have to wait for my guidance. It is not my guidance you seek but your own.

Look inside yourself.

Then I said, "But I feel like I do ask and don't get answers".

Look all around you, determine what you wish to experience and live that. You sometimes hear my voice speaking through you, but yet you wait for a loud voice, because it seems so simple, so subtle. That is how I speak. Listen to the voice within you.

Stand up for yourself, declare to all the value of who you are, but most of all declare to yourself who you wish to be. But don't merely wish, intend, and more importantly create. Create and re-create yourself in the highest and brightest image you can of who you are and what you can become. You are divine and holding yourself back and accepting any less is one of the biggest personal sins you can experience. Your life is given to you to create joy and love. Begin with self then all else is easy. It is then you realize that I do not direct your life but create for you the opportunity to create your own.

Therefore, don't wait for me, because the biggest joke is that I wait for you. I cannot create for you that which you do not know. It is when you know that I bring to you the tools of the magician. With these tools you create life, not for others but for yourself.

So don't look to me for help until you decide what you want to create in your daily journey of life. Be aware and be determined, for out of these confidence is built and with this confidence you marshal all the forces in the universe. These forces you call energy, and all energy combined forms me, and this is the energy you call God. And God wants what you want.

Little by little each day you take steps, small baby steps, but now it is time to make a quantum leap. Embrace yourself, love your self, and re-create yourself in the brightest picture you can hold of who you can be. Intend the best and it will happen. To the extent that you've developed your confidence, then it is to that level I can assist you. But make no mistake I am not the creator of your experiences you are, I am only the conduit. I created you in the image and likeness of me by giving you the power to create in your world. In your daily life you create your experiences with the power that you believe you have.

Let me explain: If you believe that someone else has more power than you, you limit your own, and therefore will not utilize your incredible energy to live a life of your own choosing. You all want this yet few of you create it. Those that do you call special and gifted. But hear this, no one, no individual has more power than another. What needs to change in your vocabulary is your definition of power.

In each moment share with the world the magnificence of who you are.

To God, power is the belief within an individual of the level of energy they have to create their own life experiences. No one is born with more or less than another. Your experiences shape how much you believe but that does not diminish the power itself.

It's like radio waves, all the signals and sounds are there you just need to be able to tune into the right frequency. You can tune in or tune out. That is your choice. However, the better choice for you is the one that brings you ultimately to joy and love.

Intend to create what you wish to experience and I guarantee you that God will help. However, the road to your intention will not be the same one you've traveled thus far. You cannot travel the same road that got you here and have it take you someplace else. Accept change.

Do not resist change for if you intend something different the familiar will not get you there. The familiar is not change. Resistance to change is what holds you back from the magic of daily living.

You are all part of nature and everything in nature changes. What is natural continually evolves. Decide to be from this moment on an evolving creator of life.

Be someone special to yourself and look to yourself, always. No one else has the answers for you. That's your power, do not give it away, do not hoard it, use it. In each moment share with the world the magnificence of who you are. To create magic in your life begin with the intention and a burning desire to know the creator within. This is the wellspring of magic, and life. This is how you shape your experiences.

Remember, no experience has any meaning except that which you give it.
