

My Vision

A personal moment of reflection – reaching for a moment of peace during a difficult time in my life.

To be loving in each moment of now.

To appreciate all my experiences, those I judge as good and especially those I judge as bad. And, as I remember more of my personal power, to drop all judgments and just experience. Experience life as a series of choices that I use to create my greatest vision of who I am.

And who am I? I am a co-creator of my life with God.

As I remember more of my power to create, my life changes. Negative things still happen, but my thoughts change, and I no longer judge anything or anyone. Therefore, I allow all life to be as it is, just as I allow myself to be. As I do this I create a life without needs or expectations. I know that when I hold expectations I do not allow myself and others the divine right to be and to grow into our fullest expression of life.

To be loving in each moment of now.

I hold love in my heart. And how do I do this?

By loving myself. Through seeing the divine beauty in myself I can then see it in others. This way I transform all my relationships, for all living things are divine in their own right, no less or more than I.

I release control over my life. How do I do this?

By allowing myself to be. In each moment of now I allow myself to witness the perfection of all experiences. My life is transformed by this level of perception in each moment. I release all pre-conceived notions of how my life should be. For I limit the magic contained in my life through trying to control the experiences I am a part of. My true divinity cannot be controlled only experienced.

I listen to my heart, for only in listening to my heart can I achieve my highest accomplishments.

I am held in the loving embrace of God.

Each of us are powerful beyond measure.

I ask for guidance to make manifest this divinity I hold within to the grandest glory I can express.

With God all things are possible. Growing within me this awareness is transforming my life in this pre-sent moment.

I am ready to embrace my higher self and allow my life to be divinely guided.

My connection to all is growing. As I grow and feel this connection to God and all that is, my higher self's purpose is shown and becomes a part of my life moment to moment.

Love me "O cherished one".

I am God as God is me. Recognize this and live it moment to moment.

Divinity cannot be controlled only experienced.
